Monday Briefing – 14th March 2022

HIGHLIGHTS

- The Russia/Ukraine war, a more hawkish than expected ECB meeting, and, another fourdecade high US CPI print dominated headlines last week, seeding a week of roller coaster financial markets, with volatility whipsawing global markets and investors tottering between panic selling and dip-buying.
- Most equity indices ended the week lower (except those in Europe as they had already cratered the previous week), as sharp midweek rally reversed. Indeed, a pullback in commodity prices and hopes about diplomatic resolution were stymied by reports that Russia had intensified its invasion and by resurfacing stagflation concerns.
- Consumer staples underperformed as product makers ramped up their self-sanctioning policies. Simultaneously, Russia is considering plans to seize and potentially nationalize the assets of the companies that quit the country.
- Commodity prices continued their wild moves with oil swinging after the US and the UK decided to embargo imports of Russian oil and gas, followed by signals about a potential boost to OPEC+ output. The London Metal Exchange suspended trading in its nickel market after a 250% intra-day move, huge margin calls, a short squeeze and supply concerns.

- The government bond market has been just as volatile, with yields increasing significantly amid continued inflation concerns and possible large-scale joint debt issuance by European countries for energy and defense spending.
- The ECB signalled that, for now, it prioritizes its inflation fight over the need to support the economy. By adopting a more hawkish position than anticipated, and announcing a faster reduction in their asset purchases (APP ending in Q3, rather than at the end of the year), the selloff in bonds intensified while peripheral spreads widened.
- The US Securities and Exchange Commission indicated that it has put five Chinese firms on a provisional waitlist for delisting from US exchanges if they fail to comply with audit requirements.
- In China, the government announced its 2022 GDP goal of achieving about 5.5% growth.
 Many analysts regarded it as an ambitious goal and raised their expectations for additional macro policy measures.
- This week, the economic calendar will be fully-loaded but will probably face less scrutiny than the war in Ukraine. The headlining financial market event will be the FOMC monetary policy decision on Wednesday, followed by the Bank of England on Thursday and the Bank of Japan on Friday. In the corporate world, Volkswagen AG, Fedex, Enel, among others, will report earnings
